Speaker Bio

Patrick Hendriks is a doctoral student with Professor Buxmann at the Software & Digital Business Group, Technical University of Darmstadt. He holds a degree in industrial engineering with a specialization in mechanical engineering. His research efforts focus on the adoption of artificial intelligence in organizations and the determinants that influence the success of human-artificial intelligence collaboration. His methodological approach primarily involves computer simulations and laboratory experiments.